TABLE X-XX STATUES

1d20	Statue Description
1	Gathrak's Legacy: A statue of Gathrak the troll. Graffiti covers part of it.
2	Torren's Might: A statue of Torren the Psioniscist.
3	A huge fully armed figure cast in pure obsidian from top to base stands tall. It's armor is spiked and it's hands rest on the hilt of it's sword which rests point down into the base. At that point where the sword meets the base is a carved crack where 'liquid' pours forth from it and drips down the side as fingers and hands reach out to grasp the sides.
4	A huge anchor cast in bronze lies near the wharf. When touched a name can be uttered and that name, providing it is of one who truly was lost at sea will appear on the massive base.
5	A tall, once pure white obelisk rises to the sky. It is covered with strange ancient writings and is rumored to be only one of many.
6	A figure of an elf, possibly a druid, rises from the base and roots of an ancient tree. The tree must have been massive while it lived and the figure's meticulous craftsmanship can not be denied in spite of the slight weathering it has taken.
7	A small stone, about the size of a large tome, lies half in and half out of the ground. It seems a marker of some sort but the writing is difficult to make out.
8	A number of stone formations hang in a perfectly circular formation from their base, each one carved with a chronological scene which spirals down from base to tip. In the center of the formation, on the ground is a dais on which a statue of the dwarven god sits.
9	A huge stone statue of a spider spans the street forcing you to walk beneath its legs.
10	This tree is actually a sculpture, living and growing it's branches twist and turn in fanciful ways. A circle of small stones decorated in swirls is placed around the base of the tree as a sea of highly polished mosaic glass winds its way from the stones to the base of the tree, as if to form chaotic paths. Every tiny branch has been sculpted even to the very top branches suggesting it was done either by small winged creatures or is the work of magic.
11	This primitive statue stands at the entrance to the city. Made of local stone and weathered by time it still stands its full eight feet tall. In goblinoid it simply states "Uglesh great leader and king of mighty clans" The goblin figure is strong for it's kind and wears well fitted armor. A spiked crown sits on its head and face is frowning as its hand is in the act of drawing its sword. It even has a ring on its right hand.
12	Pillar of souls, a monolith made entirely of skulls. Stark white in color, mist appears to spill out from the mouths rising to the sky. When wind blows the right way it sounds like moaning.
13	Golden statue of the king standing with his foot on the head of a dragon.
14	Monument of an elf riding a wolf holding a book and backpack overflowing with scrolls. It is titled Tristam's legacy.
15	A blue and white marbled statue. When light shines on it, it captures and reflects it back in a kaleidoscope of colors. "In honor of Oben Dreamweaver" is inscribed on it.
16	The elven tree of light. This pure white oak tree's leaves are platinum in color. The tree girth is wider than the arm span of a dozen elves.
17	The serpents rock. This enormous rock is shaped like a dragon. On the belly of the dragon is a memorial to a silver dragon.
18	This statue is of an armored knight. "To honor all those that fell before you" is inscribed at the base. Foul markings have been scribed on it's surface.
19	A statue of a plate armored figure with his sword raised high and the symbol of the god of valor on his shield. "In honor of Laramo who valiantly strove against evil no matter the odds."
20	A large silver unicorn statue acts as a centerpiece of a large fountain. At night the unicorns' horn glows brightly providing a soft light to all those who tarry around it.
